THE LEADER IN EVERY CITY

the STEINWAY & AEOLIAN DEALER

A RRIVE in any city—seek out the lesding, most pro-Steinway and Aeolian Dealer.

For, the wise buyer, these days, asks "What is the sec-ond name on a Piano?" "Who made it?" He knows the value of a name which represents skill, resources, good faith, alue of a name which represents skin, resources, general and sincerity.

The worth of "Acolian" as the second name upon a riano has been recognized throughout the world. Famous astruments have been brought under Acolian Sponsorship. Their priceless traditions and policies have been constantly uarded and improved. To do so has required tremendous resources, for fine things take time to produce. It has required the massing of brain and skill without precedent. But the world responds to such sincere effort. The Acolian Company of New York has become the Acolian Company of America, England, France, Spain, Germany and Australia—the dominant musical instrument makers of the world.

So, to serve his patrons best—to show a variety of the finest achievements in Piano-making, the alert dealer carries the wonderful line of Aeolian products. Its completeness and the excellence and high quality of its instruments make the Aeolian Franchise one of the most valuable in piano history.

The Aeolian Company makes the Weber, Steck, Stroud and Wheelock pianos and the Duo-Art Reproducing piano. Adding the Steinway—the world's finest pianoforte—to this representation—gives you a choice of the world's leaders from which to make your selection.

Florida Crisis Demands All Bureau's Attention

California Grape Men First to Plan Co-operation

WASHINGTON, July 20. (P)— Buried deep in work at the end of its first week, the Federal Farm Board passed up the half-holiday enjoyed by other government workers to go ahead with its task of oreanisation.

The Florida emergency caused by the fruit fly is the first and only specific proposition to gain the attention of the board. The Floridans were teld to get all State agencies together on the question of relief for marketing and to reappear on Mordes.

the Florida situation, the board tackled again, its problem of determining a general policy for the up lift of agriculture and for handling the $150,000,000 as its disposal follows.

The board has decided that all leans must be to co-operative manifesting agencies. No loans are to be made until the usual avenues of credit—the banks and the government's intermediate credit institutions—have been exhausted. Because it must deal directity with co-operative marketing agencies the board has sent word to American farmers to organize. Only about 2,000,000 of the 5,000,000 farmers are now in the co-operative associations of the various commodities.

his grape industry will be among the first to set up a stabilization corporation to take charge of marketing the crop which matures the fall. Lioyd Tenry, vice-president of the California Vineyardists' Association, will appear before the board Tuesday to present plans for the stabilization corporation.

the organisation of these corporations by the co-operative marketing associations and producers as a means of centralizing marketing plans. After the formation of the stabilization corporations advisory councils are to be selected for each commodity. These councils will be the intermediaries with the Farm

The Frontis Citrus Exemples presented the appeal of the fruit growers of that State for relief in marketing such of the crop as is spared from the fly postlence. Earle L Wirk, president, and C. C. Commander, general manager of the exchange, appeared before the board. They are now enlisting the united support of other marketing agencies of the State presparatory to going before the board again Monday.

> Adjustments to Airplane Needed Before Flyer Can Start Tokio Attempt

Talcona (wash) July 31. (*)—
Following a day of rest after his eight-hour and twenty-aven-minutes hop from Los Angeles to Tecoma, Lieux. Harvid Brousley tonight was awaiting impatiently the arrival of factory experts temocrow to give his low-winged monopolaxe. City of Tacoma, a final check before he attempts a monstop flight to Tokin. More efficient gasoline valves and a pump, special spark plugs and a wheel instead of a fail aid to give more speed in taking off will be installed. The wheel will be dropped after the take-off to cut

If the factory engineers are able to get through their tasks Monda a test flight may be made on the day and the final take-off will be as soon thereafter as the weather parnits. Bromisy is now studying the weather reports. While they is a bare possibility of a take-of Tuesday morning it is hardly as pected that the plane will be in thems to see a new before Western Pollowing a confurence with County Commissioners Campbell and Meeth, Bromisy armounced this afternoon that the trees at the end of the $400-foot runway must comdown if he is to take the air safely in his plane which when loaded down with fuel and equipment will seein $600 pounds. The plane will garry $900 gallons of gas and oil.

Challenging Variety at our Color Show

OME SEE at our Color Show the beauty and variety which Essex offers at no extra cost. In this as in every other way open to proof Essex has proved its right to dare. It challenges the performance, the style, the luxurious comfort of any car at any price, on the basis that no other gives you back so much for every dollar you put in.

A Big, adult-size "Six." Fine to look at. Roomy and comfortable. Rich, handsome upholstery and appointments. A SUPER-SIX motor—70 miles an hour—60 miles an hour all day long.

In getaway and hill climbing it challenges any car. It is built by Hudson under Super-Six patents—that is why it is so smooth—so powerful.

Hydraulic shock absorbers, 4wheel brakes, radiator shutters and air cleaner are standard. They do not cost you one cent extra.

The same with the new type GLARE-PROOF rear-view mirror, safety lock, starter and electric gauge for fuel and oil on dash. Bright parts are chromium plated. Add them up yourself and you will see easily above $100 in the "extras" that Essex provides at no extra cost.

That is why motorists by thousands are switching from past favorites, and trading in their present cars for the big values Essex the Challenger gives.

A Wide Choice of Color AT NO EXTRA COST

... The variety is so great you have almost individual distinction.

$695

Your present car will probably cover the entire first payment.

WHEN the new Pierce-Arrow Straight Eight made its debut early in the year, a waiting list was started. There has been a waiting list ever since—and most of the time it has been more than two thousand names long. A situation unique among automobiles today.

It just isn't possible to force Pierce-Arrow production without some sacrifice of fineness-and that is something which is not possible to Pierce-Arrow. The result is a motor car that carries its every tradition to even higher

The new Straight Eight has brought new beauty and performance to its field—has set a new mode in fine motor cars. And to those who have helped make this possible—those who have waited-Pierce-Arrow is genuinely grateful.

N THE CLOUDS
Of course Col. Lindbergh has a sense of humor. When some of his newspaper friends here sought to quishim about his domestic plans he said that they were still up in the air.

That plane the Southern Star which tently flew from Panama to Lima is some hopper. There is something 2000 miles of wet ocean and rough it between the terminals and most of is virgin territory so far as the flyers concerned. course of people.

concourse of people.

It was a peculiar coincidence that the first ocean voyage that reached the United States territory proper set sail from that self-same English port hundreds of years ago. There were not many down at the beach to see it off and little excitement dispatched it.

America has come to be accepted as a matter of course. Our easy pacifism enjoys our physical heritage with scant appreciation. The winning and transmission of this heritage are coming to be regarded coldly. Some would delete it from our school histories. We are losing sight of the heroism of our forebears. Easy come, easy gol Some of our softlings would hand our heritage over to the parlor Bolshevists.

But the Mayflower was no pleasure But the Mayflower was no pleasure was no Fourth of July picnic. Ruman blood and bones fertilised the hills and valleys and women's tears watered these historic places.

The winning of the West was no holiday excursion. Mission fathers gave their lives to plant refuges from border to border in our own State. Hardy pioneers crossed the almost inaccessible mountains into Death Valley and were lost in the depths. The Donner party rotted in the snows just east of Emigrant Gap in Northern California almost in sight of perpetual spring. Those days of despair were not play days.

It is a great day, as some one has said, when the world turns a corner and runs into a new idea. When Gallico, and Copernicus discovered how the heavens go, harnessing natural forces began. Even the discovery of America was a hy-product. The prison periods of these worthies were not just frolics. Flinging the harness on the thoud and a yoke on the thunderbolt lifted intolerable loads from the backs of human beings.

As a result our national domain with beings.

As a result our national domain with about one-twentieth of the world's population grows one-eighth of its live stock; one-fourth of the grain; pruduces two-thirds of the cotion and iron; one-tenth of the wool; one-half of the coal, zinc, lead and copper; three-fourths of the oil and one-third of the water power. Here brains and matter reset and collaborate. We are the heirs of the ages.

That plane the Southern Star which feechtly flew from Panama to Lima is also some hopper. There is something like 2000 miles of wet ocean and rough rock between the terminals and most of it is virgin territory so far as the flyers are concerned. The Andes stick up a long ways into the clouds and offer few inviting spots to roost.

IKE ANOTHER HELEN

The two California Helens had to play of the world as determined on the Wimbledon courts. It is a bit cheery to note that a couple of alert and graceful girls from the same State and carrying the same forename should be the star performers before the nets of the universe. Citizens will be giad to empty a noggin of orangeade to Helen Wills and Helen Jacoba.

THE NEW MONEY

TOwn D. Young, the miracle manafter putting to sleep the dogs of war in Europe, begged to be excused from a demonstration and street reception in New York. He insists that he is a private citizen and not a public character and that, therefore, these brass band affairs are not in good tasts. Anylow, he not only dosen't need publicity, but wasted. War is a terrific waster. Never wasted for the heirs of the farmer of the Magna Charta. He did not give us the famous insistument; it was wrested from him at the polm reteritory rights, trial by jury and free line may it anniversary be celebrated as the Interdependence Day of the world.

Our spiritual heritage is beyond comparison. The Bible and the Galilean inagire the reverence of the milienniums.

Personal Glimpses of World-Famed Southlanders

Some men are world-famed because they have flown higher, run faster or made funnier faces than anyone else. Dr. Robert Andrews Millikan is famous merely because he is one of the greatest acientists in the world. His discoveries have solved problems over which solentists had disputed for a century. His books are studied all over the world and several European countries are enrolled as students in the California Institute of Trechnology because he is president of it.

As we rode out in the bus to see him we fell into conversation with a studious-looking young man. "Going to Caltech?" we asked.

"I am if they'll let me in," he replied. "I came from Wisconsin just to study under Millikan. We think our State university is the best there is. But I want touch with Millikan himself."

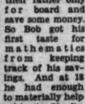

And not long ago we were talking with Fannie Hurst. "The greatest thrill I've got out of this visit to California." she said, "is that tomorrow I'm to meet Millikan." And Miss Hurst wam't speaking as a student of science. She was awed by the great achievements of the man. That is the way intellectual people have regarded Millikan ever since he was awarded the Nobel prize for physics in 1923 and followed that achievement with others as epoch-marking.

From Overalls to Oberlin

Prom Overalls to Oberlin

Yet at the age of 18 there was nothing about Bob Millikan to suggest that he might win fame. He had been earning his clothes and spending money ever since he was 13, being the son of a country preacher with six children. He was strong, could run like a rabbit and swim like a fish, and siter he was 14 thought nothing of working ten hours a day in a mill. His mother, "a thrifty wee woman," urged her sons to count on their father only for board and save some money. So Bob got his first taste for mathematics from keeping track of his savings. And at 18 he had enough to materially help his father in sending him to Oberlin College.

"Both the Millikans and the Andrews were pioneers," he said. "When the Western Reserve was opened to settlement they left the stony Berkshire hills of Massachusetts for Ohio. Similarly, they moved on in time to Illinois, where I was born, in 1863. at Morrison. When I was 7 we moved to Macnokota, Iowa, where we lived till I was 18. We lived just like the youngsters in William Allen White's Court of Boyville. Shirt and overalls were all the clothes I wore from May to October—never a shoe. "Oberlin Academy was a prep school attached to Oberlin College. In my junior year, the academy needed an instructor in elementary physics and my Oreek professor, knowing I needed the money, wanted me to have the job; so when I went home for vacation I took along a physics book and worked everything in it. I got along so well that I was in line for a berth in the college if I could extend my studies. So I went to Columbia and studied under Michael Pupin, the most inspiring man I ever met. Then the University of Chicago was just starting and I went there to get in touch with Michelson. But Pupin wanted me to study in Germany and helped finance the arrangement, and while I was in Germany Michelson cabled offering me $900 a year as his assistant. Oberlin was willing to pay me $1000, but I thought Michelson was worth the difference and went to him.

we wanted to ask about cosmic rays, electrons and a lot of other things on which Millikan is the highest authority, or the international commission in intellectual co-operation, of which he is chairman and in which Germany is represented by Einstein, France by Bergson, and so on. But we knew we couldn't understand, anyway, so we said:

"Doctor, many people are wondering what this marvelous new scientific, efficiency and mass production age is going to do to the world."

"It is the greatest age the world has known or can know for a long time to come," he declared promptly. "My grandfather was closer to the Pharaohs in his mode of life than to me. True, the man in mass production does one monotonous thing—but man always has. Only he used to have to do it twelve hours a day—like the agricultural drudge hoeing corn—and now he does it in only six to eight hours. He has leisure to develop intellectually and physically."

Dr. Millikan is white-haired but vigorous, alert, fond of swimming, golf and tennis, and when his eldest son Clark represented America in the high hurdles at Wimbledon in 1923 he was excited as any sporting dad. He has three children and in social and family life throws off scientific broodings and shows a charming personal side. But when he gets absorbed in a scientific problem he forgets time, fatigue, hunger, everything, and they do say that Mrs. Millikan sometimes humorously threatens timt mext time she's going to marry a

CUTTING A MELON

Something over 18,000 carloads of melons are being shipped out of the Imperial Valley this season although more than 46,000 crates were turned back by the inspectors as not being up to standard. This represents a mighty lot of breakfast refreshment for America. Sometimes we wonder what we would do without this wonderful valley.

Ey James J. Montague
If Billy had a dragon—
A great fiame-breathing dragon
Which were a wreath
Of jagged teeth
Upon its massive jaws—
A brute which could devour
The very tallest tower
Or tear in twain
A railway train
With its tremendous claws.

Bad boys would not affright him, No dog would dare to bite him And angry cows Could not arouse Wild terror in his breast. Serenely he could wander Here, there and over yonder Not in the least, By man or beast, His heart could be distressed.

But Billy has no dragon,
No large and loyal dragon,
Fierce, brave and strong
To come along
When forth from home he strayed
And when he goes a great way
Beyond the garden gateway
Where dogs or cows
May lurk or browse
He's very much afraid.

IS DENOMINATIONALISM PASSING?

BY JAMES M. WARNACK
Charch Editer of The Times
"Truth is one, although men call it by various names," is a sentence from the "wisdom religion" of the East.

Religions, in so far as they are true, are one in essence—but can they or should they become one in organization and action? True, the world knows two or three well-organized churches, but among vital questions facing Christendom today is that of the possibility and the practicability of effecting the organic, as well as the spiritual, union of all churches founded on the life and doctrines of the great Galilean. and attendants more directly on Canada's recent unification of the basis of sheer merit and the spiritual work accomplished, respectively and socially, is as yet difficult to determine. Protagonists and antagonists of church union bring conflicting reports from out, northern neighbors and it seems hard to discover the real status of the Canadian church.

However, in the light of recent events and movements, stimulated by Canada's experiment, no one can question the fact of the increasing interest in the sphicet of church unity.

Church of United Brethren in Christ, now is in prospect. A strong movement to unite the Presbyterians and northern branch of the Methodist church also is in progress. It is notable that on the day the Methodists and Presbyterians met at Pittaburgh to consider amaignamation, the Disciples of Christ and the northern Esptists were meeting, for a similar purpose, only two blocks away.

The movements mentioned above are pertentious—aithough, of course, anything like universal church union would have to be more inclusive than merely the consolidation of a few large denominations. However, as a matter of fact, almost every member of every church wants church union. Providing that the "one hig union church" shall conform to the ideas and ideals of each protagonist of church union? A simple proposition—but not so simple of solution.

"As far as the general public is concerned denominationally invested funds," declares by. Henry C. Culbertson, president of the Ministerial Association of the acceptance or rejection of Jesus can be divorced from all theological argument."

More and more are the church federations and ministerial argument."

More and more are the church federations and ministerial associations, in nearly all parts of the United States, atressing the value of interdenominational and even of nondenominational christian work, and recently the Los Angeles Ministerial Association voted to assist in every way in expanding the powers of the Council of Federal Churches of Christ in America. There was only one dissenting vote.

With all this strong trend toward church unification, it still is probable that "the end is not yet" and that one of the stumbling blocks that will prevent the "consummation devoutly to be wished" by many devout persons consists of the gulf between Modernists and Fundamental late.

the stumbing blocks that will prevent the "consummation devout by to be wished" by many do you persons consists of the guits between Modernists and Fundamentalists. A question which the lexicographers will not be able to settle to the satisfaction of the adherents of the various creeds and isms.

Church unity is still further menaced by the fact that Fundamentalists and sometimes even the Modernists disagree among themselves, as in the cases of two great Los Angeles from the Modernists disagree among themselves, as in the cases of two great Los Angeles from the Modernists disagree among themselves, as in the cases of two great Los Angeles from the Modernists disagree among themselves, as in the cases of two great Los Angeles from the statement of a fact of which war.

No one can travel through the Shantung flood plains and forget the picture of the endless miles of farms, green and waving like the garden spot it is—and yet their largest valley is that of the River Hoang-ho—"China's Sorrow." Another instance where some day the young engineers of China will do the thing for their country that England has done for Egypt in the Sudan, with irrigation.

And what is true of the development of China is true more or less of the rest of Asia. Pifty years has seen Japan evolve from a little farming and fishing country into a highly organized nation. "FOR IMMEDIATE" "PURCHASE" We unqualifiedly recommend "TEXAS GULF SULPHUR" "PILLSBURY FLOUR"

Both of these stocks are New York Stock Exchange listings and represent two of the largest and most successful industrials of our great nation.

"TEXAS GULF SULPHUR" is the largest producer of sulphur in the world, handling over 50% of the total production. Its earning rate has increased from 77c a share in 1921 to $5.72 a share for 1928, and its estimated earnings for 1929 are $6.50 per share.

The lowest quotation on Texas Gulf Sulphur during this year was 69%, with a high of 85%. The New York Market closed Saturday at 721.

We fully believe this stock will show a 25-point rise during the next 120 days.

"PILLSBURY FLOUR" is the holding company for the Pillsbury Flour Mills Co., one of the largest flour milling companies in the world, having offices and warehouses in 31 of the largest cities in the United States.

The earning rate on the common stock for 1925 was $1.74 per share, and for 1928 these earnings jumped to $5.21 per share.

Owing to the low wheat market this year we look for a big in-crease in earnings for 1929.

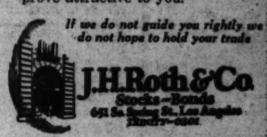

During this year Pillsbury Flour hit a low of 39½, with its high quotation 64½. The market closed Saturday at 48½.

We confidently expect this stock to reach a high of 75 before December 1st.

The reasons why these two stocks should show a wholesale advance during the next few months far too numerous to set down

However, our house extends you an invitation to call at our offices, 'phone in or write for all the in-formation we have accumulated on these two issues, but do not hesitate about placing your buy order at once.

Our low marginal trading ac-commodations will undoubtedly prove attractive to you.

The popularity of jade dates back centuries among people of the far east. "Lure of the Orient" is a most apt expression of this stone, which today is admired by lovers of fine things the world over. This week we are featuring a very interesting collection of necklaces, bracelets, pins and also unusual carvings. This collection includes pieces at very reasonable prices as well as those of considerable value.

See our windows. The illustration shows a very rare necklace. The eatch is mounted in platinum and diamonds.

A NEW weave in a new blanket . . . all wool, double, and satin bound. As though' these things were not enough to recommend them, these blankets have been given a special pricing. Obviously, this is the time to secure a splendid value. The solid tones resemble a fine basket weave, while the subtle interweaving of a colored thread with a white thread gives a misty softness. Two broad bands at the ends emphasize this delicacy of color, and wide satin bindings give the final touch of luxury and beauty.

Blue, Gold, Orchid, Green, Tan-All-Wool Double Blankets, 100 pairs in all, are an event at $14.75 each.

They are an ideal. So long as they tower majestically above the througs, there is something to hope for.

And in disapproving of sand-wichmen the association surely cannot have reference to the perfectly appointed man-about-town whose evanescently illuminated shirt promises content to cigar smokers. He, too, is a man of superiority.—[New York Times.]

WHERE THRILLERS ARE EVOLVED

THE OLD MAN. By Eugene MacLean. Coward-McCam Company, New York.

A. K. Sherburne, owner of a chain of newspapers, known to his employees as "A. K." is revealed in this novel as one of the human dynamos who so through life in a continual whirl of excitement and who have the faculty of injecting their own enthusiasm into those who come in contact with them.

The pages of "The Old Man" are crowded with editors, big business men, cub reporters, and that most freaded of all individuals in the newspaper world, the canny cashier whose whole life is spent in saving the pennies that are garnered into the paper's treasury.

It's a gay story written with swing and gusto. It has none of the elements of a great novel but it is darned easy reading. It pictures the hectic life in a newspaper office about as well as anything you will find between covers, and it is, in all probability, a fairly accurate account of the rise of one of the nation's great newspaper chain owners.

FILMS HELD FOREIGN TO STAGE WORK

> Director Opposes Union of Authority in Preparing for "Talkie" Pictures

Proving by his achievements since the advent of audition on the acreen, that he is qualified to speak with authority, Roy Del Ruth, one of Warner Brothers' directors, inexorably defends the recently published opinion of Henry King, also a prominent producer. The latter took exception to the attempted custom of producers to combine the effects of film and stage directors in the making of talking pictures. The film industry, says Del Ruth, has a high regard for the capabilities of the stage director, yet the analogy that exists between their duties and those of a film director is so far apart that no good can result from combaning the talents of the two in the making of a talk-interceptor.

Talking pictures are not stage productions and their making is entirely foreign to the presentation of a foothight opus, declares Dei Ruth. "The combination of the two means that the one becomes a teacher for the other, and vice versa. Their ideas conflict, with the resultant inharmonious feeling inevitably reflected in the finished

Del Buth further feels that the basic idea is impractical, as it is human nature for each individual to claim credit for his efforts; and, where an achievement is recorded, there is bound to be a difference of opinion as to just who is responsible for it.

Del Ruth numbers among his contributions to the talking acreen "The Desart Song." "Conquest," "The Gold Diggers of Broadway," "The Hottentot" and "The Aviatog."

stephantine antics of Kari Dane in the comedies he makes with his little partner and team-mate, George K. Arthur, recall Dane's early career as a motion-picture "heavy." Many, in fact, think Dane broke into the movies with his characterization of "Silm" in "The Big Parade." Dane, who appears as Sharkey Nya, champion stoker in "China Bound," which is his latest comedy with Arthur and which is now playing at the Boulevard Theater, arrived in this country as an immigrant from Denmark in 1916 after a varied career in his native land. He had been a mechanic, soldier, aviator, racing driver, sailor and garage owner. He boasts about four-teen different trades and carries a union card for most of them.

When Dane first landed in New York he got a job in a Brooklyn foundry for $13 a week. The salary was low because he couldn't speak a word of English.

From this start Dane drifted over to Manhattan and the old Metro studios, where he obtained a job as estra for $3.50 a day. From then on pletures were his forte, with Hoily-pletures were his forte, with Hoily-

BLIND HEAR MOVIES a capital experiment of letting the been on a world tour, 175 persons

A capital experiment of letting the blind, so long denied the recreation afforded by the silent drama, hear the "talkies" proved extremely interesting. A party made up of inmates of a local institution was invited to witness a performance of a crook picture in sound form. With ears trained to an acute sense of hearing, the hlind group was able to follow the action almost as well as others in the audience. In fact, the blind spectators seemed to catch the sound effects better. In one scene where a crook barber pretends to shave a man who is really dead, without that fact being verbally announced, the blind sensed the situation because one blind man turned to the host and said: "How queer for the audience to laugh when the man is dead."—

"On With the Show" the first all-color, talking and singing picture, is now playing at the Tower Theater.

The picture tells the story of a theatrical troupe which is trying to attain Broadway. The show is broke, and everybody and everything depends on a single perform, ance.

Betty Compson is seen as the prinn donna who imperiis the show by refusing to go on. Joe E Brown amuses the audiences with his eccentric dances. Others in the cast are Louise Fazenda, Sally O'Nell Arthur Lake and Sam Hardy.

FAR-REACHING INFLUENCES
If not in the twinkling of an eye, yet in the first five or six years, the sketch is made . It all depends on three influences: the mother, the nurse, and the governess. I was superlatively fortunate in all three. They were not only good, but beautiful as well. This I learned in later years from my elders. It was to the charm of my young nurse that I owed the welcome I received in the cottages or the lovely village in which I was born seventy years ago. I can remamber the lush pastures, the green lawns and the beautiful trees in that alumberous country where the lovely village in which I was born seventy years ago. I can remamber the lush pastures, the green lawns and the beautiful trees in that alumberous country where the white-faced Herefords grased and the spiles grew. Years later I thought that the fairest work of nature was the color of the almond groves, and the iris, of Kashmir. But the apple blossom, when it blushes in the warm clasp of the enraptured sun, almost vies with the delicate beauty of the almond. To my nurse I owed my visit to the gypaise in the hop garden. I alsall never forget the droway sceni as the gypaise in the hop garden. I alsall never forget the droway sceni as the gypaise in the hop garden. I alsall never forget the droway sceni as the gypaise in the hop garden. I alsall never forget the droway sceni as the gypaise in the hop garden. I alsall never forget the droway sceni as the gypaise in the hop garden. I alsall never forget the dr mas gentle push eastwards. Certainly I have liked the gypsy folk ever since.

I can remember with freshness the cottages with their little rows of daisies, primroses and sweet-Williams, and how I thought the food of the villagers was delicious. Like Effic in "Silas Marner," "I like the working folks and their victuals and their ways." We were on the same level of thought. What he talked about I cannot now recall, but I have a suspicion that my friends of the cottages were against authority, and that they had a sympathy for one like myself, who was being brought up by rule. One rebel, in particular, was old Betty, who was being brought up by rule. One rebel, in particular, was old Betty, who was a master weeder in our gardens. She had a dear face, like an apple in March; she was weatherwise and a teller of stories. She always welcomed me in the act words: "Come his ways, the pretty dear!" . My mother and my governess taught me to read without tears, and the easy, happy life which I have enjoyed is due to these eight years.—[Sir Walter Roper Lawrence, Bart, in "The India We Served."

Autumn's Celer
Always it is a safe prediction that the prevalent color for autumn couture will be brown; out this season. Fashion has declared her favor unusually early. Already, coats, gowns, millinery in the new brown, have appeared and although they seem somewhat too warm for the present, still perhaps we may be refreshed, in sending the thought to cicthing for the chilly fall days. The tones of the autumn leaf are most prevalent, and in the new pile fabrics—velvets both in chiffon and more tangible weaves, velveteens, and other soft materials, the brown tones are inspiring.

and such being the case, the protest of Mono officials appears inadvisable.

Los Angeles is the hub of all California development and to care for its future millions, the city must have additional water. As Los Angeles grows, so will the rest of the State become increasingly rich and the acreage in the other counties become more valuable.

Mono country, by aiding Los Angeles in this purchase, could materially boost the presperity, not only of the metropolitan ares, but its own territory as well.

Back of the satisfaction of Oldsmobile owners stands the satisfaction of Oldsmobile workers in a job well done

FTER all, what is a motor car? Is it A merely so much wood and metal . . . so many gears and cotter-pins?

Orisit, as Oldsmobile workers believe, something more ... the culmination of the skill and ideals of the men who build it, from the first engineering sketch through to the final check-up and inspection? To express this spirit one of these workers—a veteran milling machine operator in the Oldsmobile factory—coined the phrase, "Anything short of my best is not acceptable." And this charge of responsibility has been adopted by his fellow workers throughout the organization, as their plant slogan.

Oldsmobile engineers are constantly at work—proving and re-proving the product they design—testing the merit of new ideas —ever seeking the better thing. In addition, they call upon the vast resources of the General Motors Proving Ground and General Motors Research Laboratories. Always they have in mind . . . "Anything short of my best is not acceptable."

Skilled operators, unerringly guiding great machines—efficient workmen, accurately fitting Oldsmobiles together, part by part -keen-eyed inspectors, rigidly checking the work of the producers—each man, whatever his job, from the highest executive to the newest shop employee, follows the same rule . . . "Anything short of my best is not acceptable."

The result is a standard of precision, a degree of accuracy, worthy of the finest cars.

The satisfaction of Oldsmobile workers in a job well done is largely responsible for the thorough satisfaction Oldsmobile owners find in their cars. Oldsmobile owners are loyal, because they know that Oldsmobile is loyal to its owners, not only in the matter of fine workmanship but in all the details of manufacture-in the quality of materials, in the progressive ness of Oldsmobile engineering, and in the generous measure of Oldsmobile value.

This owner enthusiasm is reflected in Oldsmobile's tremendous and ever-increasing success. Month after month, Oldsmobile sales continue to grow. Time after the new owners write, "My neighbor prais his Oldsmobile-and I find that everything he said is true."

Oldsmobile respects this public confident the public, in behalf of every Oldsmobile worker, to maintain steadfast allegant to the Oldsmobile pledge: "Anythin short of my best is not acceptable."

REVOLUTIONARY IN 1924—STILL MORE SO TODAY

"It was inevitable that Chrysler should attract a degree of scientific interest accorded no other car in the past fifteen years. - Engineers, naturally, were first to appreciate that Chrysler, while adhering strictly to soundest principles of design, is a distinct departure from previous motor car practice and performance. -- They recognized in Chrysler an advance in automobile engineering as revolutionary as the development of the X-ray in medicine. Professional acclaim has already given Chrysler the name, 'the engineer's car'."

HOW HAS CHRYSLER DONE IT?

When an unknown motor car sets out—as Chrysler did—to grasp the leadership of a great industry, and with the speed of a meteor, sweeps to a foremost position in popularity and sales, it must possess extraordinary quality and ability.

Certainly no other motor car has come so swiftly, so impressively, to the front in such a remarkably short time as Chrysler has come.

When the first Chrysler car was placed on exhibition five years ago, the whole industry looked in amazement at what Walter P. Chrysler had accomplished. Within four years, Chrysler had leaped to third place in the industry.

How has Chrysler done it? What is the secret of this success? Simply that Chrysler gave in the beginning-each year since has given increasingly-and today gives in still greater measure-not only a finer grade of basic quality, but a higher order of performance, beauty, style, power, acceleration, safety, comfort—all at the most reasonable prices.

Call it genius, call it scientific engineering, or what you will, the bedrock fact remains that Chrysler seized at the very outset a definite leadership in style, performance and value—and ever since has maintained, improved and strengthened that leadership, despite a whole industry's constant efforts to corch has constant efforts to catch up.

Such sweeping success must prove inevitably to the buyer of a Chrysler car today that he can count on the most advanced, the soundest, the safest and the most satisfying motor transportation his money can command. Let us prove these facts in a demonstration of your own choosing.

In creating the new Viking, the designers sought dis-tinction along the most difficult path—the achievement of beauty, grace, and elegance through tailored lines. The result more than justifies their diligence, for although the new Viking Eight was introduced only a few weeks ago, the motoring public has already appraised it as a car of exceptional beauty.

The Viking is a low-swung, trimly-tailored car of generous size. # Barbara, Cal. in the final tomorrow, Vines defeated the Chicago star who was seeded No. 1 in the draw, 6-1, 1-6, 6-3, 7-5. Pare took the second set easily, but could not cope with the mixture of shots Vines exhiblied. Another upset was tossed into the women's singles by Ruth Balley of 8t. Louis, who eliminated the favorite, Carolyn Swartz of Los Angeles, 6-3, 7-5, the St. Louis player found her game after trailing 1-3 in the first set, and never was in danger thereafter. Clars Louise Zinke, defending her women's singles title, qualified to meet Miss Balley by conquering Catherine Wolf of Indianapolis, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. The result also was in the nature of an upset, Miss Wolf having defeated Miss Zinke in the finals of the Illinois championships several weeks ago. Besides meeting for the singles championship, Gledhill and Vines will pair up in the doubles find against the Chicago combination of Fred Royer and George O'Connell. The Coast pair today trimmed Kirk Reid of Cleveland, and Pare, 9-7, 6-4, 9-7. Royer and Jennings reached the finals by an 3-6, 4-6, 6-1, 1-6, 6-2 victory over Le Roy Weir and George Jennings, also of Chicago. TOMMY LEE'S HARPOON CAPTURES "TIMES" RACE s helped to his feet and gamely continued after a few minse' rest but was disqualified because of the assistance.

Later, Dean Cromwell, coach of the L.A.A.C. boys, told me at after a thorough check-up he was of the opinion that a altitude affected only those boys who participated in races ove one mile—that the sprinters, hurdlers, middle-distance above one mile—that the sprinters, natures, memory men were not bothered in the slightest.

However, Joe Myers, who handled the publicity for the meet, disagrees entirely with the altitude bugaboo, and builds up his argument with statistics as gained from the meet.

FIRST of all, he dissects the six-mile race and points out that Moore had previously run a hard mile against a head wind and then reminds me of the fact that Ken Doherty broke the record in the decath-ion—ten of the most gruelling events imaginable, and all run off on the same day. Myers, who is an attorney of Denver, writes as follows about same day. Myers, who is an attorney of Denver, writes as follows about the situation:

"I don't believe that the six-mile run proved anything concerning altitude. First, there were only two men with any class whatever in the field. Gregorie, the winner, and Gus Moore. Moore, if you recollect, had run a terrific mile against a head wind within an hour before he started in the six-mile race. That alone would account for his collapse. As to your little Indian, it seems to me that I recall his being lapped about three times in the six-mile run at Lincoln, and I don't believe that he furnishes a fair basis of comparison.

"Pardon a bit of press agenting on the side, but I had an interesting talk with Ken Doherty, who won the decathion and who set a new American record for the event. He said that it was his experience, and that of Dodd and every other competitor with whom he talked that they found themseives as tired at the conclusion of the events as they did any place, but that they recovered with miraculous quickness. Previous experience had been that at the conclusion of the 400 meters he was always all in and his experience here was the same, but after a two-hour rest he came back to do the 120 high in 162-5a, within 2-5 of a second as fast as he ever had run the event in his life, and a full second faster than his usual time for the 120 in a decathion race.

"He further said that he usually, at the completion of a decathion in one day, was able to make it to bed and remain there exhausted for a day after its conclusion with no strength or inclination to do, anything else. Here he said he took a bath, laid down for about an hour, and then got up to attend a banquet and a motion-pleture show before going to bed, and arose the next day to make a 350-mile auto trip without a feeling of strain or exhaustion.

"I think the final tip-off on the allitude question is furnished by the decathior statistics. At Philadelphia in 1922 Doherty scored 7600 and a ing of strain or exhaustion.

"I think the final tip-off on the altitude question is furnished by the thion statistics. At Philadelphia in 1928 Doherty scored 7600 and a stion points as against 7784 and a fraction points here in 1929. At adelphia, his events were spread over three days. Here they were pleted in one. In 1925 at San Francisco, Osborne scored 7706 and a tion points and 7187 and a fraction.

"Doherty's experience and accomplishment here, in the most grueling the Trojans, Cards ition of altitude."

TISDALL FALLS

But for a bad header taken by R. M. N. Tisdall of Cambridge, as he leaped the final barrier five yards ahead of the field the invaders might have taken the 220-yard low hurdles, as it was John Lincoln of Princeton who, up to that moment had looked like nothing more than a good runner-up, went on to win while Tisdall struggled to his feet and smiled gamely.

Hedges cleared 6 feet, 2 in the high jump, half an inch better than the mark set by C. T. Van Greisel of Cambridge in 1925. Another Princeton athlete, John E. Gore, covered the mile in the new record time of 4m. 23s. flat, four-fifths of a second faster than H. B. Stallard of Cambridge, traveled in 1921.

Orsen C. Beaman of Cornell won the two-mile run in 9:33 4-5, bettering the 1926 mark of T. C. Fooks of Cambridge by a full eleven seconds. Tom Hampson of Oxford, beat out Bob Gariand of Princeton by two feet, giving his team one record to take back to England, his brilliant 1:36 silicing four-fifths of a second off the half-mile running mark, made by R. G. D. Rudd of Oxford in 1921, the year these institutions first met on the track. Of the twelve events Princeton won five, Cornell four, Cambridge

You remember that we showed you how to form the tallow candles. When you have reached this point, you start to tell your story: "A thief stale a pound of tallow dips." Then, ing very tired he sat down on a chair and went to sleep." You form the thiefs thair by putting the pointer and middle finger of the right hand into the rings on the back of the left thingh, and the chair will be formed as in Figure 2. Draw the books out as far as possible to the right, through the fingers of the left hand, being ear-ful not to lose the loops on the forming the shears as in Figure 4. "While he was cutting off a dip a constable came to arrest him bringing along his tipstaff." Release the string held by the right thumb, whole right is arrown at the tip as in Figure 5. ### SALT

By Mary Leslie Hemier

The salt we use may have been dug out of the earth, or taken from the water, in the shape of brine. The salt water is put in tanks, and allowed to evaporate. This leaves the salt in the form of crystals, which are showeded in league, flossetimes, freetend of letting all the salt evaporate, the crystals are nated out of the brine as soon as they

As the salt forms around the edge of the tank, it is raised into fittle piles. If it is to be used for fine table salt, it is dried by artificial hant. For salt of a larger grain, it is allowed to ovencome such disease. If this method is such disease. If this method is used, it has to be sent to a salt refinery, where the salt is ground by a special machine ready for the

IS CIVILIZATION DYING?

CIVILIZATION! What deeper significance has this word, of which we make use without giving a thought as to its real meaning? As, however, that elegant poet with the mind of a philosopher, Bully-Prudhomme, one day remarked in my presence, part of the misunderstandings among men who think is due to their want of attention to the necessity of first defining their terms.

Define the word civilization? Is it sufficient to say, as others have done, that the term stands for a combination of agreements patiently elaborated by man to make his relations with his fellows more easy and to eliminate one by one the motives of distrust, envy and fear? I confess that the definition does not appeal to my intelligence. It seems to me to map out the outlines, to contemplate the surface instead of delving beneath. I should suggest a definition of greater simplicity and one that, I think, is more incisive. I should suggest that civilization is an organization both of morality and of material well being. Such a definition—which grasps as nearly as possible a fleeting idea dependent on the changes of time—will not, I imagine, be contradicted.

Without too great difficulty an agreement might be arrived at as to what must be understood by the word civilization.

civilization." which is constantly on the tongues of politicians of all shades of opinion, which is to be met with in a thousand articles issuing daily from the press, is not susceptible to a definition acceptable to everyone, for the very good reason that its meaning differs with each one who uses it. Let us endeavor to catalogue—to classify—it. A word first of all, no more than a word apropos of politicians and thinkers who—purposely excluding denominations of too extreme a kind—I will call traditionalists. They maintain that civilization can only develop in the shadow cast by those who have gone before, and who are consecrated, as it were, by their statuelike repose. According to them, the only way civilization can make

ROYAL FLOWERS For Winter and Spring

You Can Experience the Pride and Delight of Growing Them from Howard & Smith Seeds

H. & S. PRIZE CINERARIAS—Our own distinctive Gold Medal strain, acknowledged throughout the world as the best extant, almost every mail bringing European orders. Sweepstakes winner in Pasadena and West Los Angeles Flower Shows, the only ones where exhibited. Admired by thousands last spring at our Montebello Nurseries. Flowers gigantic, many over 5 inches in diameter, with petals 1 to 1¼-inch wide. Borne in immense compact trusses surmounting bold dark-green foliage on shapely dwarf plants 15 to 18 inches high. Their exquisite colorings are indescribable. Sow now for February-March blooms. Offered in shades of Blue, Crimson-Carmine, Salmon and Mixed, the latter affording a marvelous color range. Per packet, 50c. One packet each of the separate groups of shades and one of the mixed, all four for $1.75.

SCABIOUS—Bright Christmas bouquets will be available from seed now sown, as these hardy biennials will bloom in midwinter when there is paucity of flowers and continue into the summer. The blossoms are very large, of varied and distinct colors and decidedly beautiful, making a pleasing, cheerful display. Listed as Double White, Double Crimson, Double Rose, Double Fiesh Pink, Azure Fairy (light blue,) Black Prince (deep marcoon,) and Double Mixed (all colors.) Per packet, 15c. One packet each of the six separate colors and one of the mixed, all seven for $1.

STOCKS—Our superb strain, producing an unusual percentage of large, fragrant double blooms on numerous fine spikes. Empress Elizabeth (silvery rose pink.) and White Lady are splendid bedding dwarfs growing 15 inches high. The taller ones, Beauty of Nice type, are White, Lavender, Dark Blue, Yellow, Blood Red and Mixed. Per packet 15c. One packet of each, all eight for $1.15.

A silence waited for her answer. And because there was only truth in her, she gave it truthfully:

"No . . . I know he doesn't."

She was dismissed from the stand and court was adjourned until the next day. Mats put in a dreadful sleepless night. She had ruined Harian.

Next day came and she had to go through another ordeal.

Welr concluded his examination, driving home the point of Harian's insincerity with appailing force and astuteness. And numbed of the cruelty of it she scarcely knew when Harian's counsel, Alexander Greoville, rose to cross-examina. It all seemed part of the one awfulness.

But wheras the examination had been entirely of Mrs. Primrose; and to Welr's horror he heard Mats say, in answer to Grenville's question as to what Miss Granger had been like when she first saw her:

"She was awful ugly."

From that moment the case for "Mrs. Primrose" slowly collapsed.

Bit by hit Grenville, by his cross-examination, got the full account of her lack of facial beauty; of her spiteful comments against preity women in general and Rosie Lyle in particular; of the scene with Harian when he had kept Mats up at No. 10. He used Mats as if she had been a witness for the defense.

Actually she was a witness neither for the

The Mrs. Primrose's case was technically for damage: the showing up of Kelt an had been her own private and sepurpose. In the eyes of the law she suing him for having harmed her ty; and in the eyes of the law she was lee to prove that she had ever had any ty to be harmed.

The mean that the had ever had any ty to be harmed.

The next result of the case was that Mrs. trose brought contempt and ridicule upsariell; that Harlan stood exposed to the le as a charlatan of the most consible sort; and that Mats—though no took her into account on this source—plunged into even depeer misery, urlan had swift proof that his popularity not going to survive the disclosures of lawsuit. "But it's ripping at school," he said. "The lovely and hig and exciting. It's an adventure, too—you've no idea!"

The day before Christmas was a busy one for Mrs. Felpitt, for there were many things to prepare. In her mind as she worked there was, however, the anticipation of the evening, of the pleasant rite of Alan's stocking, extra finely furnished they year from the boarder's money, and above all of the news he had for him of his future in Radminster.

He kept on putting his head into the kitchen where she was so busy, showing a whole-hearted interest in the question of food—but presently she missed his rankly greedy interruptions and, as the clock ticked on past funch time, wondered nervously where he had gone.

He returned at last, wet through, cold, but elated.

"Oh, Alani" she cried, with that mixture of relief and anger which is best known, perhaps, to mothers. "Oh, Alan, you are manghty—you're wet and dinner's spoiling. Where have you been?"

He came into the room, leaving a mudding in her face.

"Gory, mother, but look what I've been doing. I've been sailing this—int' she nice had with a hard intensity that made him recoil. "Where hold on the head out for her admiration. It was to mode ship which she had leaked to her of Mary Carwin."

Her heart smote her, but the was fighting for him now.

"But, darling boy," she cried, "your mother surely knows what's best for you—and you could live here with me always and go in to the office every day. Just think of that, Alan—you'd always be at home—"

For a moment they searched each other's eyes. Tears welled suddenly in hers. In a moment he was on his kness by her side, his arm around her neck.

"Oh, mummy," he whispered. "Tm so sorry. I didn't mean to make you look like that—"

Bhe took this for victory, and held him close to her.

"It's all right, son-boy—it's quite all right. I'm sure you didn't. We won't talk about the sea any more, will we? I'll tell you about Fossick's. It's a marvelous chance for you—"

In the manner of childhood he attacked a different angle. "By daddy has been dead a long time, ham't he? You've never told me what he was. Mummy."

She straightened herself abruptly. "Your daddy was a very brave man," are said. "You must be brave, too. One can't always de exactly as one wanta. You'll know what I mean when you're older. Now, say good night, old boy—it's Christmas day tomorrow, you know."

She tore herself away from him and reached the sanctuary of her room, breathless. She paced up and down in a perplexity of thought. Her eyes fell on Alan's stocking, already buiging, on a chair. Presently when he as asleep ahe must hang that on his bed. But first, she had something else to do.

She turned the key in the drawer and took out the model ship. Almost superstitiously she gazed at it, wondering at its fine detail. All thous ropes and things had names, she supposed. The fire in the kitchen would be out, but the attitus-room would do. She crept downstairs, but the embers were nearly black. Presently she set herself to coax them back to heat and life.

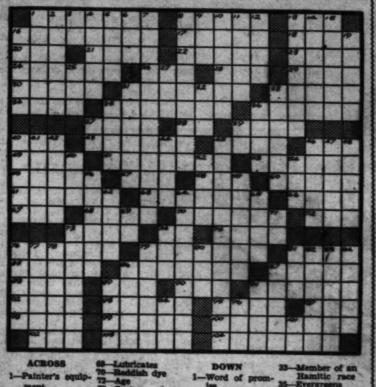

A sharp noise unstairs startled her. She went outside the door to listen, and caught sight of a light in Alan's room. She had to take strong hold of herself before she could go up.

Alan's door was ajar and she pushed it open softly and peeped in. The candle was guttering on a chair of his bedied, but he was asleep. On the counterpane was a heap of shavings, and a pocket-halfe lay where it had fallen on the floor. But there was something else on the obed. She came closer to see it property. It was a cork float such as fuhrermen use, and it was already roughly shaped.

The boy lay on his back, just as he had fallen asleep in the middle of his labors. There were marks of tears on his cheeks, and his eyelashes were wet. One arm lay on the covertiet, paim upward. Mrs. Felpitt stared down at it, fascinated almost she could have swom that a moment ago that clear skin had shown a banal blue tattooing. A heart pierced by an arrow it had been—as ba Young Alan woke with a start on Christmas morning to a peal of bella. Instinctively his gaze sought for his stocking. He sat up suddenly with a cry of delight. With rapturous eyes he took it all in. Before her was her house, the lonely little house which should have been empty and peaceful, awaiting her homecoming, as she had left it that morning. But there were lights in her windows—a light in Alan's window, where no light had any right to be, with Alan away at school these three weeks and more. At her gate she stopped again, holding her breath. There was a car standing in the lane. She knew that old car well, and her heart turned to stone as she gazed up at Alan's window. A dark shadow passed to and fro across the orange blind, and bent down and straightened itself again. Tremblingly she passed through the door and entered the tiny hall.

"Dr. Parley," she called, "doctor, what is it?"

"Mrs. Felpitt?"

"Yes—oh, what has happened?"
An accident. I've taken a great liberty. I had to."

The words that were burning in her burst forth: "Not Alan—nothing to do with Alan?"

"No, no, of course not." There was a little pause. "Your boy's at school,

"Yes," she echoed, "he's safe at school.
Shall I come up? Do you want help?"
"Please don't. I'll come down in a minute." The door above closed sud-

The same don't. I'll come down in a minute." The door above closed suddenly.

The girl who came in sometimes from the village had left a good fire in the little sitting-room, and there was a kettle standing in the grate. Mrs. Felpitt put it to boil and-ast flown to walk. It would have been too cruel if it had been Alan, today of all days, when she had arranged so splendid an opening for him to step into in Radminster as soon as he left school. In Radminster, where he could go daily and still live at home—with her.

Presently she heard the doctor's feet descending, and opened the door to him. "You'll want hot water," she said, steadily. "It's nearly boiling. Now, tell me."

The old man glanced at her out of shrewd gray eyes.

"The man appeared from nowhere in front of the car. I think he meant to turn into the hedge and got daxied—"Whose car?" she interrupted. "Was he walking?"

"My car. Lucky for him I'm a doctor. He was on a bicycle, coming down the hill round that corner like a lunatie."

"It happened just outside, then?"

"Yes, that's why I brought him in here. I had to, really—dared not move him far even in the car. And in the dark and rain I couldn't see. Luckily there was a laborer passing. I didn't know you were away, of course, till I got him into the house. Then I aw he must be put to bed at once. I know it was a liberty."

She shook her head. "Not from you," she said quickly, her mind traveling back to one dark night twelve years ago. "Poor fellow—who is he?"

The doctor laughed shortly, "T've no idea," he said. "Too busy to think of that. A man of thirty-five or forty, I should say. His leg is broken—badly. He's unconscious. The worst of it is—"he shot a glance at her pale, determined face, and paused.

"You mean to say," she took him up, "you mean to say he can't be moved?"

But the pale woman by his side may not have heard that question. "Will he live?" In her voice there was comething which hesitated, as if she had not meant to ask quite that very ques-

He glanced at her, startled. "Of course, of course! Whatever made you think that? I'll bring a nurse out with me tomorrow. He'll want nursing."

"Yes," she said, stonily. "I can't nurse him—and he can't be moved." She weighed this statement profoundly as she made it.

He shrugged his shoulders deprecatingly. "You can see for yourself—"

"Oh, yes," she interrupted, wearily. "I can see." She gased down at the banal blue tatooing on the brown forearm. The doctor's voice penetrated her thoughts.

"I must go now," he said. "It's Mrs. Barlock, of course, at the farm. I was on my way there, you know. I'll look in again, though, in an hour or so—on my way back."

She did not seem to hear him. "Win to come round, do you think? Tenight, mean?"

"Unlikely. Look at him."

He followed her downstairs, leaving the lamp on Alan's dressing table. At the front door he stopped.

"You're a brave woman, Mrs. Pelpitt," he said, impulsively. "Tm grateful, you know."

Dr. Parley, returning four hours later, found Mrs. Pelpitt sitting before a fire which she had lit in the room where the man lay. She stood up as the door opened.

"I thought you were never coming." she said. "He hasn't spoken."

"He's all right," he muttered, stepping over to the light. "What's all this?"

"His belongings. There was a small wallet thing on the carrier of his bicycle. I've put them all out for you to see."

The doctor ran his eye over the motley collection. "Don't tell you much," he remarked. "Hullo! A bar of medal ribbons—what a string of them. Spiendid fellow!"

"Yes," she answered quietly. "There's

"Who is he?"

"There's nothing to show. I've been

You've been through too much, he hought, gazing reflectively at her tired ace, which those last twelve years of truggle to make ends meet had acted eyond knowing. He pictured her as he remembered her when she had first come to that tiny house. Young she was then, and round and fresh. Nothing but a girl, really, then, in spite of her widow's weeds and hopeless, haffled sys.

The boy's an obsession with her, he thought. Pity she hadn't married again. "Twe been thinking," she said. "He must stay here, and there's a room for the nurse. He'll be gone before the holidays of course?" There was tension in that casual seeming question.

The doctor nodded, smiling. "Long before I hope."

"Yo been thinking, then. Perhaps when he comes round it would be best not to mention Alan to him, at all. I mean, he might worry that he was keeping him out of his room or something."

"Possibly," the doctor admitted. "Quite likely. I'll tell the nurse if you like. You seem to think of everything."

"Twe cleared all Alan's things out of the room," she continued. "I can think of nothing more at present.

"Go away," he exclaimed, with that terrible violence of the sick. "Til talk as much as I like. Mrs. Felpitt?"

The nurse, with heightening color in her sallow cheeks, shrugged her shoulders expressively as he went out.

"Mrs. Felpitt? Are you there? They've tied me up so that I can't see, you know."

"I know," she breathed. "I'm here, though."

He fell back on to the pillow and was sient. He was so silent that she had to speak at last.

Mrs. Felpitt nodded. "Is this the first time he's spoken?"
"Well, what you might call sense. He's miked a lot."
"Ch, I see."
"He's restlem. I've never had such a restless patient. It makes things difficult. He's very trying. There's something on his mind. Of course, there usually is."

"Oh, no," she mused as if to herself."
It was the only thing to do. Anyone would have done it. I could hardly let you die in the road."
"That's all very well. I don't suppose you even know my name?"
"None of your things are marked," the said, quietly.
"No. My name is Stargess—James A. Stargess." His voice bruke off to a silence in which he seemed to be listening intently.

and two inches deep. These lovely little bulbs have the same habit as the freesias and in color are deep blue, the blue of the scilla, and fragrant. The gorgeous Amarylis heliadonna, which blooms in July and August, is most safely moved just after blooming; it is then most nearly dormant. Crinuma, which are related to the Amarylis, may be moved at any time during the year. The German, or bearded iris may be set out now. If planted before September, most of them will form small clumps and bloom the next apring. Don't water much until the newly planted root is growing well; roots of some varieties are subject to rot. "Keep manure away from irises," says C. E. Houdyshel. "They do not require it and are often rotted by it. If you wish to cause rapid growth and increase in your plants, give much water during the summer. Iris, however, will grow and multiply, and bloom, without irrigation."

Garden Work

The watering of "glads" and dahlias occu-ples much of the gardener's attention; these, when coming into bloom, appreciate a deal of moisture. Continue to dig, water and cultivate around trees and shrubs. If there

One of the peize-win-ning exhibits at the recent San Fernando Valley show at Van Nuys, June 21-22. Delphiniums from the 'Larkapur Gardens' of Mrs. H. C. Quest made up this display.

Like the citizens of lowa, when transplanted to California, South African bulbs and plants thrive as if this were their native soil and fit the climate so well that, although not native, it seems as if they ought to be. In fact, the South Africans in Californian gardening loom so large that if they were removed, Californians would miss them almost as much as they would miss the eucalyptus trees.

Gladioli, for instance, are South Africans, and many of the most delightful spring flowering bulbs are from that part of the world. The charming race of Watsonias, which, in California, and under the skill of California hybridists, have developed most interestingly, are Africans; so is the blue African lily, the agapanthus, and also the calla lity; so is the African daisy, which will grow with the ease and certainty of a weed. And there is the Transvaal daisy, with its charming variations of the coral tint, variations which are the result of the skill of California gardeners.

in the Transvaal daisy, with its charming variations of the coral tint, variations which are the result of the skill of California gardeners.

Few bulbs are more welcome in the home gardens than are the early flowering ones which, here in California, begin to blossom in December. The tulips and hyacinths of the Eastern gardens are not so certain of success in Southern California, nor is that old favorite, the Lily of the Valley, but South Africans known as the "Cape bulbs" grow and flourish with the utmost ease—the antholyzias, sparaxis, kias, and chiefest and most certain, the freesias.

Like the Watsonias and the gladioli, freesias have profited greatly by their residence in California; very lovely varieties have been developed in charming colors—lavenders, yellows, rose color—and not a harsh tint among them? E. P. Zimmerman of Carisbad has made a fascinating improvement on Fischer's "Splendens," and has croased the freesia with the native South African gladiolus tristis, with G. Primulinus, with babinias and tritonia crocata and Watsonias—and with interesting results. The work of Alois Frey of San Fernando with freesian is well-known.

According to Mr. Zimmerman, the colored freesias were first brought out some fifteen years ago, the creation of the Italian botsnist, Dr. G. Ragioniert. These were a mixture of many different shadings, but were exhibited under the name of "Rainbow Preesias"; since this time the different plant breeders have worked with and improved the freesias. From Fischer, we have the "Fischeri splendens" in lavesder, and in pink a very lovely variety called "Appleblossom." Mr. Frey, according to Mr. Zimmerman, are "California," "Prince of Orange," and "Mendota," the latter, the best yellow freesia grown today. Notable among the Frey freesias is the variety, "Mark Peters"—a deep rose color, almost carmine. Mr. Prey bas also succeeded in obtaining a charming blue variety and a clear red.

Among the French growers, one finds "Geyer's Race," a very definite improvement on the original Italian "rainbow" type. The French hybrids are tall, robust, increased in size and at the same time good in texture.

The expert amateur, whose pocket-book is either admirably filled or elastic, will wish to go in for some of the Dutch varieties, and try some of the freesias which made a stir at the last International Flower Show in Belgium. These were "Apogee" and "Buttercup," both light yellow varieties; "Jaune d'Oeuf," a deep yellow, tinged with orange, and a charming pink sort, "Apothese." Other attractive pink varieties of Dutch origin are "Conquest" and "Delight," the latter very wide open, showing its white throat; "Golden Wonder," a clear yellow, and one of the largest; "Robinetta," ruby-red with a white throat. Among freesias this is the reddest yet. "Wistaria," somewhat like Fischer's "spiendens," has wide-open, wistaria-blue flowers.

It will be observed that the freesia has the colorings of the hyacinth, but is much more certain in California and more easy to grow.

The point of all this about the freesia, is that from this time on they may be planted. The amateur is apt to make the mistake of demanding too large bulbs, and when there is a choice, selecting these. Now the freesia bulb is small, and the bigger the bulb, the more likely it is to split and send up four or five small shoots, in which case the size of the bloom will not be so good, nor the texture of the petals.

Preesias in pots make delightful Christmaspresents. According to Mr. Zimmerman, this is the way to start them. "Plant from ten to fifteen small bulbs in a four-inch pot, using sandy loam. Place the pots in a cold-frame and start watering slowly, at intervals, to start root action. Cover the pots either with glass or buriap until the leaves appear; then give all the air possible, so as to keep the leaves short and stocky. Too much heat will produce too-long leaves, and this, if coupled with insufficient air circulation, means disaster. Provide a cool place with half shade. Be sure to give shade on hot, sunny days—water twice a week with diluted manure water."

Freesias in the garden have many delightful uses; they are charming in colonies, under deciduous trees; they make color and a gay, spring color from December on through March. According to C. B. Shaw, the plant hybridist of San Gabriel, it is not difficult to raise from seed, and one may count on four or five months from the seed to the flower-stalk.

Freesias From Seed

Here is the process: "Select good seed.

Freesias From Seed

Here is the process: "Belect good seed, and put it between layers of wool cloth; keep the cloth wet. Within a week or ten days, the seeds will begin to sprout. Then use a small sower, or a spoon, and plant the seed in benches, in a cool house, with six to eight inches of soil, planting as close as possible to the glass, but where a good circulation of air can be at all times maintained. The rows should be spaced eight inches apart, and the seed distributed evenly at the rate of fifty or seventy-five seeds in a double row across a six-foot bench. Cover very lightly, about the thickness of the seed itself. After the leaves show, keep the soil surface stirred, especially after watering; leaves should appear in two to three days, which means a gain of three weeks in grow-ing time, and prevents failure to grow from lack of moisture.

ing time, and prevents railure to grow from lack of moisture.

"When the freesias are one inch high, give liberal applications of liquid manure (one wheelbarrow load of fresh cow or chicken manure in a fifty-gallon barrel of water; let ferment two weeks and when ready to use add two pounds nitrate of soda). Stir well and use at the rate of two quarts to each eight-gallon watering can; sprinkle the plants over the whole planting, then rinse off with the hose. Give half-shade both on sunny and hot days and air from top and sides of the house. Maintain the temperature at 40-45 degrees Fahrenheit. If these precepts are religiously folowed, perfect flower-spikes will result, better spikes grown from any size of bulbs."

Agapanthus Umbellatus

The Blue African Lily, or agapanthus umbellatus, which is in bloom from June until August, is one of the most satisfying of plants for the stay-at-home gardener; it is evergreen, hardy, requires the merest trifle of attention. Year after year, the clumps increase in size and beauty and the flower stalks sent up bear from thirty to ninety lily-like flowers of cerulean blue. Once planted, it prefers not being moved. Miss Kate Sessions suggests using the agapanthus as a foreground for a planting of the pink Belladonna lily, which blooms when its foliage is absent.

Cate July Plantings

Asters, sinnias, daisies, peatstemon, goum, heliotrope, and gerbera may be set out now. Well-established trees, chrubs and vines may be planted, but it is especially secessary, when phanting, that sufficient water be given to each, and a good muich.

Wilmington's Flower Show

Wilmington's first flower show was held successfully, June 23rd, under the able chairmanship of Miss Montana Tulier. Garden clubs which have never yet held flower shows will be interested to note that the club's total assets on beginning the enterprise amounted to ten dollars. Prizes were bulbs from Charles Brazee, of Torrance, who served as one of the judges; rose trees from Teeple's Nursery; cups from the Rotary Club, from the Women's Business and Professional Club, from the Exchange Club, from the Women's Business and Professional Club, from the Exchange Club, from Drew's Flower Shop, from the P. T. A. and from Mrs. A. S. Crossfield. Also a pretty affair was made of the awards, which were presented with ceremony. Nine-year-old Florine Barber made the acceptance speech for her school, the Fries Avenue, which won a first prize. Too often awards are presented so that few have a chance to see the prize won or to see who won it. The sight of a proud and happy youngster rejoicing in his first winning, or of a charming old lady, or shy, middle-aged bachelor surprised by a public award, is a very delightful part of a flower show. The French have a happy custom of making "occasions" of such matters—and it helps to make them memorable.

Poultry Profits Increase —this Year at Fontana

EGG PRICES have been steadily rising until they are now the highest in ten years. Feed costs are the lowest in fifteen years. Rarely does such a favorable condition exist. The present outlook points to a continuance of these factors which increase your earnings. It means greater profit on Fontana poultry ranches.

There never was a better time to start in the egg and chicken business, for 1929 is surely a poultry year. Come in and let us discuss the prospects with you; tell you how much it takes to start, how we advance building loans to qualified families, and what the successful Funtana Plan can do for you.

A Nine Day's Wonder-Melon Marketing

ULES VERNE, master of highly imaginative fiction, once wrote a tale of adventure beneath the surface of the sea. Could he come back to life, he could find in Southeastern California material for a true story of life lived helow the level of that same sea, a story that in his day would have been accepted as fiction. It is true that the setting of Verne's tale was actually under the sea itself and that the great depression in the earth's surface whose story would so amase him today has no water in it save that put there by man for his own uses; but anyone who in Verne's time would have predicted the transformation of that dreadful part of the world known as the Colorado Desert into such a productive realm as modern Imperial Valley might have been laughed at as too imaginative.

There is nothing much stranger in fiction than the actual record of development in this inland sinkhole. Each one of the industries that have grown up there since men set out to conquer its grimly forbidding wastes is a miracle in itself. The story of any of them reads like something imaginative. The one that takes the palm, however, is cantaloupe growing and marfesting.

Few really grasp the magnitude of this particular below-sea level business of California's. Yet so unbelievably orderly has become its operation that it might almost be a mechanical game worked from a switch. It has taken years to develop so perfect a technique and keen brains have given that development thought.

There are five definite phases of that game of producing cantaloupes and getting them from the "bottom of the country" to the breakfast tables of America growing, picking and packing, leing transportation and sale. They are five acts in a great drama of the soil.

Growing of cantaloupes in Imperial Valley, so the old-timers say, began in 1904, when George Biles, the first man to farm the sandy area that now makes up the fich territory between Brawley and Westmorland, a territory which today produces 60 per cent of the Imperial "cant" crop, proved that the crop was adapted to this desert soil. By 1906 other men, such as I. D. Hale, had taken it up, and they began to push it forward on a commercial hasis, until 1929 sees 28,000 acres devoted to cantaloupes and such allied melons as honey-dews and honeyballs. All this represents an average expenditure of at least $100 an acre, or $3,800,000 invested in the crop be-earliness was realized and every effort was bent toward maturing the meions as early as possible. Growing is standardized toward that end so that when the seeds first awake to life in midwinter, they find themselves under ministure tents of white waxed paper on which the sun pours through the coldest part of the year. By the time the plants attain a few leaves "doors" are made on the sunny side into which the light comes directly, and by March even the tents are gone. There may still be a protection of a paper and brush hedge on one side to ward off the winds of spring, but eventually this, too, has disappeared and the vines spread and bloom to cover the beds with a mass of growth.

RUSHED BY EXPRESS

The earliest of the early melons maturing in May are the crowns set from brush-protected vines, and these are rushed to market by express, so that the sixth day will see the cantaloupes on a New York breakfast table. Some 150 cars go out in this manner to catch the high prices of the initial part of the deal. Time consumed in transit is short enough so that fully matured melons may be picked, and an agreement has been made to send by express only the so-called "full-sitps," or vine-ripened specimens, so that the season may be opened propitiously and not in such a way as to affect later demand through early noor quality.

But it is the meion that hits the center of the shipping season that keeps every-body jumping. Activity is at its height then and prices can "make or break" the game. For this, every allied industry has prepared in advance, and it is because of preparation that so colossal a movement is successfully handled. June is the peak month—this year June 29 was the peak day. Nine months of the grower's activities are focussed toward this time.

The Mexican picker, canvas bag on back, selects the melons to be picked. At the said of the row he empties the sack into waiting field bears by opening the bottom and letting the contents roll gently out. Very soon these boxes are moved on low yearons either to field packing-sheds or to on the tracks in town. Both methods of packing are still in vogue, but the trend is toward the centralised handling.

At either place the meions are sorted by hand. Culls are discarded and two divisions made, depending upon the degree of maturity. The "choice" are the "full-slipa. These go in the regular season only to near-by western markets. The "fancy," that much traveled "somebody" going to New York, must be a well-ribbed meion with proper sugar content and still solid enough to stand the journey ahead of it. It and others like it are put in a bin separate from the "choice."

They must all be packed so that uniform sizes go into the same crate. Mechanical devices have been tried, but, owing to the fact that cantaloupes are not round, they have been discarded in favor of the human hand and eye. It is the packer who, looking at the melons before him in the bin, knows how to choose the right-sized crate and to pick melons adapted to that container. Yet never for an instant does he lose time in choosing, wrapping in tissue paper, and packing them in the crates. Plats contain only one row of melons. Crates may hold 27, 36, or 45, and even these are of different sizes—"ponies" for the small melons, "standards" for the medium, and "jumbos" for the large. A few melons in each are left unwrapped as displays for that package.

With picking and packing completed,

Three links in the long chain between the producer and consumer of Imperial Valley cantalonpes. It's a busy time in the fields when the melons begin to ripen, what with picking, filling field boxes and harrying them to the packing sheds. Then the almost endless strings of "cerfor" tars must be lead for the long, hot trip overland. It was a big deal this year and the bost of it all is that the growers and shippers made a profit.

Repeated inspection of plantings, as well as distributing markets and packing-houses is provided for by the plan. Under the direction of the Chief Survey Officer, the State is divided into areas of several counties in extent, each in charge of an officer the horticultural commissioner of each county heing in direct charge of the survey work in his own county. Continuous inspection will be done by horticultural in spectors in each county.

Inspection of every commercial orchard planting of host fruits at least once during each period of maturity, when injury is most likely to be apparent, will be made. Inspection will be made at least once every two weeks of cull fruits in packing-houses. Inspections will be made of orchards along railroads and highways, of markets, private estates and residential areas having host fruits. Special survey crews will be used for areas which cannot be handled adequately by existing inspection forces.

SUPPLEMENTARY HET.P

Supplementary inspection will be the constant job of agricultural extension service agents, shipping point inspectors of the State Department of Agriculture, packing house and field men of grovers' co-operatives, furnigation men, sprayers, spray manufacturers' association field representatives and others whose work brings them in contact with field condition, as well as of interested property owners and growers. Those who have voluntered their agricultures have been asked to communicate with the horticultural commissioner of the county in which they will be on the lookout for specimens.

WHAT TO LOOK FOR

Here is what one should look for:
Infestation is likely to be followed by the formation of soft spots in the fruit or sometimes a softening of the whole fruit.
In citrus, especially grapefruit, there is apt to be a small hole in the soft section about the size of the lead of a pencil.
From this hole will oose drops of fuice if a slight pressure is exerted. Many insects which attack fruits in California will burrow into the section or flesh of the fruit, but as a rule, only one of these will be found at each point of injury, where-this year, $1,800,000, the melons go into waiting cars that have been lood for them in advance Refrigeration is the third process, which make the cantaloupe deal as we know it possible. Without it, melons could travel but a few hundred miles. As it is, they go thousands without injury. Back of this is an industry of great propositions.

In Imperial Valley itself, the Imperial Ice and Development Company manufactures all the ice necessary for the outgoing cars. This concern has five plants supplying domestic ice, also, but only three are used to supply the refrigeration directly. These plants together have a daily manufacturing capacity of 750 tons, but that is not nearly enough to keep so vast an industry going. Months in advance, ice is socumulated in storage so that at the beginning of the season 78,000 tons of it are waiting for use. The season consumes about 125,000 tons for this initial car icing. At the end, the storage ice is exhausted and it is sometimes even necessary to import ice from outside points, such as Colton. Plants are kept busy ten months in the year manufacturing enough ice for the two great movements of lettuce and cantalouses.

The Imperial Ice and Development Company only makes the ice, which it turns over in the plant to the Pacific Fruit Express, whose "reefers," as the refrigerator cars are called, transport all the cantaloupes. It is the "P. F. E." then that sees to the transfer of this white ice from storage rooms by means of conveyers to the great ice decks, beneath which forty cars at a time may be iced from a single deck. Four such decks are maintained in the valley. Here is played a unique little seens. Young fellows—many of them college boys from the north—work on these decks cled only in abbreviated "shorts" cut down from blue jeans. They slide the lee from conveyers to car tops and break it into the bunkers beneath, their skin gleaming in the sun as brown as any South Sea Islander's. About five tons are required for each car. After the cars have been moved to sheds and packed with cantaloupes—only three tiers high to allow for plenty of ventilation—they are brought back again and reiced. This time usually two and one-half tons are needed to refill, or a total of seven and one-half tons before the car has even started on its way.

Yuma, where the next reicing occurs, is only six hours away. Beyond, at a short distance, is Tueson, and then El Paso. This is particularly important at the beginning of the journey because proper refrigeration for the first thirty-six hours has been found to be the most important in warding off decay. Beyond El Paso reicing is continued to destination points, a car to New York, for instance, being leed twelve times, all told

TRANSPORTATION BIG JOB

Transportation is the fourth part of the cantaloupe deal. This year 18,000 cars are expected to go out. The Southern Pacific line handles all the initial movement. To assure efficient handling, preparation is made in advance. At least 2000 cars are accumulated on sidings near the valley and thirty additional clerks and ten mechanics are brought in, while twenty to twenty-five special train and engine crews are put on to do the necessary switching between sheds and ice decks. Besides this, five or six through freight crews are used to run between Imperial Valley and Yuma, for, while all territory in the West is served through Los Angeles, cars for points east go by way of Yuma This means that the bulk of the cantaloupe shipments pass through that city. The freight crews make the round trip daily, bringing empties in and taking full trains out on a schedule of six hours each

For these hauls, some of the mammoth "5000" type of engines are used. These, with their three cylinders, are the largest simple engines on the Southern Pacific lines, and are used to haul trains of 140 cars to Yuma. Two-cylinder engines of the "7100" class take trains of 124 cars across the desert. The biggest train that has ever gone was of 175 cars of cantaloupes pulled by one of the giants. A mile and a half in length, this was better than a circus parade in the

As far as El Paso, all trains are on the "S. P." tracks. After that, three lines are possible, two of which are under the same system part of the way to St. Louis. That city has now been chosen as the Misiasippi gateway instead of Chicago, which formerly was the diversion point. Prom St. Louis, distribution is made over the Middle West and East. Practically all rairoads in the United States are interested to some degree in the transportation of Imperial Valley cantaloupes. It is said that forty-two representatives of different lines forty-two representatives of different lines

Talking in a Big Way

Talking in a Big Way

NE hundred twenty-five years after Thomas Robert Malthus stirred 'em all up by predicting that the increase in the human family would be checked, and checked right heartily, by a lack of grub on which to feed, along comes Oliver E. Baker, economic geographer of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics at Washington, D. C., and tells the Institute of the Harris Foundation of the University of Chicago that there will very likely be a stationary population in this country within fifty years, and that the requirements of that populace as far as food is concerned will be far below production.

Even in the present day, he points out, there is a surplus of tarm product—has been for the past eight years—and he says that the surplus exists in spite of the fact that the American farmer could double or treble his output if the price rose greatly or the cost of things he buys declined. Inventions, discoveries, education and improvements in economic organization all tend to increase production, Mr. Baker says, and that's the reason, he contends, that Malthusianism will have to cool its heels while we wrestle with the problem of surplus production yet awhile.

Having disposed thus neatly of Thomas Malthus, Mr. Baker goes on to give two ways in which surplus production might be conquered in the United States. No. 1 is to eat less vegetable matter and more meat, the meat requiring a greater acreage for its production. No. 2 is increased exportation, and that's "out." says Mr. Baker, until the nations of Europe and Asia have more money with which to buy American farm products. And, we might add, until they have more of a will to buy as well as the cash.

This economist gives some interesting results of modern methods and practices. The tractor alone, he says, has released 20,000,000 acres of land formerly required to feed horses and mules, but which now support meat and milk animals. Gasoline has been substituted for feed in the northern States, and the feet of the combine have permitted the use of arid land f

The tractor and the combine have permitted the use of arid land for wheat which would not have been profitable under old methods, thus adding 8,000,000 acres to the Great Plains region, with a corresponding decline in the more arable regions.

"American diet has changed greatly in the last thirty years. The per capita con-sumption of all cereals today is 240 pounds as compared with 380 in 1900, the con-sumption of wheat having declined 20 per cent in the last fifteen years and the con-electrical of onese has increased from electrical of the increase having come since the prohibition law went fato effect. Fruit consumption has remained about stationary, but there has been a swing to eitrus fruits. Vegetable oils have also become an important part of the American diet, and pork consumption has increased, while best consumption has been maintained.

"This shift in diet from the leas expensive meats and milk has been encouraged by the large increase in income of the urban population during and since the World War. The recent surplus of agricultural commodities would have been much greater, and the depression of prices of farm products much more severe, had not this shift in diet occurred."

Very interesting, these mass figures which encompass the whole trend of a nation,'s eating over a long period of years. Perhaps too big for any practical use to the "little fellow" who wants to know what crop to plant. But interesting, nevertheless, to ponder as one eats his Sunday breakfast of oatmeal mush, ham and eggs, toast and coffee, the while realizing in a dim sort of way that if one drank a cereal or fig preparation instead of coffee, he thereby would change, in an atomic degree, the grand total for 1980.

Moths Cause Loss

Serious losses have been taken by many growers of new potatoes in Los Angeles and San Bernardino counties on account of the presence of heavy infestations of tuber moth larvae, according to Paul K. Wilson, deputy horticultural commissioner of Los Angeles county. Shipment of new potatoes to market recently have been heavy, on some days as many as twelve carloads having arrived in the Los Angeles markets via truck. Standardisation inspectors have been kept exceedingly busy inspecting and supervising the reconditioning of loads where the amount of tuber moth damage exceeded 5 per cent, which is the tolerance of any one defect allowed by law. It was found necessary to prosecute two potatos growers and one broker for selling potatoes heavily intested, Mr. Wilson said. Another potato grower was taken to court and fined for selling potatoes deceptively packed in lugs.

Fruit Fly Bulletin

Prof. H. J. Quayle, entomologist at the Riverside Citrus Experiment Station, has recently completed Circular No. 215 entitled "The Mediterranean Fruit Fly and Other Fruit Flies." The publication minutely describes the dreaded pest and carries a pictorial reproduction of the insect in exact size and color. The bulletin is issued as a part of the campaign to protect the State against the possible inroads of the fig.

The Cover Page

The picture on our cover page this week is of a 56-car freight "drag" of cantaloupes on the Southern Pacific east of Brawley en route to Yuma, where it will get its first iceing in transit to Middle West and Atlantic seaboard. During the peak of the cantaloupe season trains as big as this leave Imperial Valley every day.

Rern Ships Melons

Bakerafield.—Watermelon and cantaloupe shipments in carload lots started in the Mc-Farland district the week of July 7, Clarence-Rogers being the first in that area to ship. There are about 250 acres of watermelons and sixty to seventy acres of cantaloupes in that part of Kern county, according to an estimate made by S. P. McCawley, horticultural inspector for the McFarland-Delano district. About sixty-eight acres are reported from the Wasco-Shafter area. Most authorities agree that the melon acreage in Kern county is smaller this year than last. Some think the decrease is due to the rather unsatisfactory prices of last year, and others think that cotton has forced melons out, as it has several other crops. Local growers have been holding off on watermelon shipments, waiting for the last of the tremendous Imperial crop to be cleared off the market. Mr. McCawley declared that recent continued hot weather was bad for the melons, and that, while it had not yet affected them badly, it would do so if it continued unbroken. Heat dries up the cantaloupe vines, he said, so that the fruit does not set. The same heat sunburns watermelona, rendering them imperfect.

Small handfuls of this mixture were put in different places outside the ranch fences, and on the rabbit trails. W. A. Brawley.—Beef cattle buyers are again in evidence in Imperial Vailey. Though 30,000 animals have been shipped out of the valley, there are still more to move shortly, axide from this, steen have come in for summer fattening. Mexican cattle are said by local cattle men to do especially well during the summer because they are acclimated to warm weather. Al Kalin has bought many of these, while Harry Jones, another well-known local operator, recently brought in 1000 head from Capistrana and points up the coast.

New Officers Chosen

Exeter.—C. A. Hilliard, fruit inspector for the Exeter district for the past two years, was recently named deputy Tulare county horticultural commissioner, succeeding Oe-car Hemphill, who was named horticultural commissioner following the death of Frank. R. Brann. Simultaneously, D. T. Rewey of Porterville was made second deputy commissioner. Mr. Hilliard will have his office in Visalia and will be in charge of control of posts, standardisation and other duties, his territory being the northern section of Tulare county, taking in land north of the Lindsay-Tulare highway. Mr. Rewey will work out of Porterville, having charge of work south of the highway. A. A. Tuttle, who has been fruit inspector in the Ivanhoe district for the past year or so, was moved to the Exeter district.

The plan and the organization which will handle it can be credited to Roy R. Mathews of San Jacinto, who used to be a professor of mathematics and is still addicted to statistics and other definite forms of information. Before evolving his plan, which he hopes will prove a solution of his community's turkey and turkey egg marketing problems. Mr. Mathews corresponded, he says, with every reliable source of information of this subject throughout the Coast States. The result was a formidable array of facts and figures.

He learned that there were but nine counties in California where jurkey hatching eggs are produced in appreciable commercial quantities and, in these, but one made any serious attempt at egg selecion, while another made an effort to select birds for hatching eggs. There is a simslar project in one adjoining State, but only one. When it comes to the matter of time of production, only one county in California can give this district any competition, Mr. Mathews declares. It is as important for hatching eggs to arrive on the market at the right time as it is for tomatoes, cantaloupes and such things, he says, pointing out that the San Jacinto "turke"

and Small Farm Ho By Row H. Cost

The principal vegetables known to be beast of the fruit fly are peppers, eggplant, tomatous, string beans, pumpkins and squash. It would seem, then, that the gardener and small farmer can play an important part in the program to keep the fruit fly out of California for all of us have some of its heats in our gardens.

FINGERPEINTING A ROGUE

The California Agricultural Extansion Service circular 29, under the title of "Control of Pocket Gophers and Moles in California," is a booklet that every pardener and small farmer should have. This publication covers the eradication of these rodent pasts of the garden and farm—peets which are very disconcerting at times.

We note in the circular an interesting discussion of a subject on which the average gardener knows very little. Joseph Disson, who prepared the booklet, states that "because most of the gopher's work is done in the dark, either underground or at night, the disastrous results of the animal's activities are hetter known to most people than is the animal itself." No doubt, brother gardeners will subscribe to this statement. Two very important paragraphs of the university circular are reproduced herewith:

"Coophers have from three to twelve young per litter in California has been found to be 53. Normally, only one litter is rearred per year, but in altalia fields where food is plentiful, two or three litters a year may be reared. When using the trellis system for cucumbers, it is best to sow the seed in a drill, thinning the plants out, after the diabroteca and other pests have taken their toll of the seedlings, to about we've inches apart. The trellis should be a four-wire system, strongly supported by posts at regular intervals. As soon as runners develop they can be tied to the cross wires with a soft cloth. Cucumbers on a trailis should not be planted too closely to other tall growing crops or to a fence for they are easily influenced by shade.

Nature Needs Help With Her "Bounty"

Experiments are under way along these lines.

Queer fruits bristie all over the experimental plota. Samson's tangelo is a hybrid, a cross of the tangerine and pomelo—medium in size, amooth in skin and with a pomelo flavor. One of the St. Michael fruits is a large orange with fine grained flesh and appetizing in appearance but unfortunately, not edible at all. There are several varieties of citrange—hybrids of the tritollate and sweet orange. Many varieties of pomelos are there, growing from seeds or buds imported from the fule of Pines, Bahla, Brazil, Cuba, Hawaii, Florida and even Slam, on the other side of the world. Sweet and acid limes, some red, some yellow are bearing there. Citron from India, Italy and the Philippines, seedlings or budded, find room on the station grounds.

Some Pointers Upon Splicing of Wires

It is often necessary in making circuit repairs to remove sheet lengths of insulation from electrical wires and calds. In doing this the electricials wires and calds. In doing this the electricials about the farm should use a sharp knife, hold the blade at an angle of about thirty degrees to the wire, press the cutting edge in through the insulation and gradually turn the blade parallel to the wire. In this way the metal of the wire is not injured. After the insulation has been removed in this manner, place the cutting edge of the knife blade on the wire, holding the blade at 90 degrees to the wire, and move back and forth until the metal presents a shiny appearance. This is necessary in order to give the wires good metal contact when the rolles to metal.

A good joint or splice must be mechanically and electrically secure without solder. It is then soldered unless some approved splicing device is used. The purpose of the solder on a joint is to keep the joint secure and minimise corrosion, but not to carry current through the connection. Bolder is not a good electrical conductor; it has a relatively high electrical resistance, and if forced to carry much current will melt and run off. Where stranded wire is used, the strands should first be twisted together and the splice then made as for solid wires.

The wires having been cleaned of insulation as explained above, they are then bent at 90 degrees around each other. Holding the crossed wires firmly between the thumb and foredinger, continue to wrap each wire about five turns around the other, but do not allow the turns to touch each other. This last precaution is necessary in order to get the solder to take well later. Tighter the turns with an electrican's pilers and out off and bend down the ends of the wires. The joint is now mechanically secure and electrically complete.

However, the joint and wire must be protected here where the insulation has been removed. This is done by soldering the joint and replacing the wire insulation over the splice. Insulation is also necessary to insulate the wire and prevent short cir-

Before the solder can be made to stick the splice is covered with acid or soldering paste and heated with an electrical soldering iron or a gasoline torch. The solder is then melted and run on the joint, and the excess rubbed off with a cloth. The insulation must been becomed.

To de this the joint is first covered with electrician's rubber tape to about the same thickness as the original wire rubber insulation. In applying this tape, one should stretch it somewhat and apply it firmly to the wire, lapping one edge slightly over the other. In this way it forms a solid rubber covering in a very short time. Over the top of this rubber tape a layer of electrician's friction tape should be applied to hold the rubber tape firmly in place. In some instances the finished joint is then painted with an insulating compound to help exclude moisture.

lugs are used to attach the wire to the binding post. In making an eye the wire insulation is first removed for the distance of about one-half inch. The wire is then bent back through 90 degrees and then gradually shaped round with the electrican's piters to the proper opening for the eye. Poorly made eyes or straight wires under binding screws often pull out and are a frequent and needless source of trouble. Eyes should not be used on wires larger than No. 8, and it is a good practice to use lugs even on No. 8.

In soldering lugs on wires, the insulation is first removed as for an eye and the inside of the lug and the bare wire are tinned

Builds Up Herd With Good Guernsey Sires

AMLDSOTON.—One of the large randme of this dictrict is that of C. W. Main, with 186 productive acres. He grows corn, cate and alfalfa, all as feed for his 130 dairy own. When Mr. Main first came to Callornia from Missouri he started in to grew ranges, but twelve years ago he changed wer to dairying and he likes it much better han any other form of agriculture.

His first herd was a small one composed of cows of doubtful lineage, but he began breeding up by using purebsed Guernsey bulls and now his entire herd is made up of high grades that look like pure-breds and give that breed's rich, high colored milk. He used to sell his own nillk and had a route of his own, but now he disposes of the preduct wholeasis.

Nearly 150 acres are planted to alfalfa. One small patch of Sudan grass is growing now, as an experiment, he says, and so far it seems to be a successful one. The cowspanture this field several hours a day and Mr. Main thinks it adds to their health and he knows it cuts down on the hay they require. Sliage is used for the milking cowspanting the early feed and corn coming on latef.

"I've found that it pays to put all the manure back on my land," said Mr. Mais "I admit that the 'grocery money' from this by-product comes in handy, but my experience is that it is worth three times as much as it sells for. I am able to keep thirty cows more than I could before 'returned the manure to the land."

One well with a flow of 150 inches provides the water needed for irrigation and domestic uses. Twelve years ago the land was bare. Now the ranch is producing abundantly and the home, constructed of adobe, is bowered in trees, flowers, wines and shrubs.

Mrs. Main is a school teacher and Callfornia is her native land. Her father came "pund the Horn" in 49 and mined gold in Little Creek Canyon in those hectic days. Today the gold from the Guernsey milk is coming in steadily though not in as spectacular a way, and probably the "cleanup" is more profitable.

To tin a lug or wire, cover it with paste or acid and heat with the soldering iron or a flame, then apply a coat of solder. A thin layer of solder will then atick to the wire or lug. The lug should then be filled with molten solder and the wire should be thrust down into the lug as far as it will go, the solder being allowed to cool. In using approved solderless lugs, the directions of the manufacturers should be followed.

Mediterranean Fly (Continued from Page Three)

as several fly larvae are usually found together in a fruit attacked by them. In addition to citrus, any thin-skinned fleshy-fruit or similar vegetable is likely to be attacked. Root or foliage crops however, are immune.

External evidence of injury is not always apparent in infested fruits, pometimes not until considerable damage is ione to the interior. Usually, however, here is a withering of the tissues around the place where the eggs were deposited under the skin. Sometimes there is a runnay exudation, sometimes there is a runnay exudation, sometimes a browning of the tissue, and in some fruits a reem spot will remain on the skin while the rest of the surface shows normal ripming color. None of these surface indisations are certain, evidence. Many common California insects cause somewhat timilar injury and some of these forms identification.

A fly larva has a soft legiess body, usually whitish in color, approximately three-eighths of an inch or less in length, without legs, cylindrical and tapering from a blunt tail end to a pointed head end. The head is usually not apparent from the red of the body. These forms move about by wriggting or equirming and some of these closely related to and including the Mediterranean Fruit Fly, have the shifting the draw head and tail together and jump a

Any insect forms answering this general description should be placed in a stopperse glass vial of preservative fluid or if this impossible, then put in a tightly capped of stoppersed glass container and in any cas delivered to the nearest inspection officer Small vials for this purpose can be purchased from any drug store. The preservative fluids probably easiest to secure are: a 2 per cent solution of formalis in water, or alcohol denatured with mercuric chloride, which can be prepared immediately by any druggist and can the be diluted for use with approximately at any of the content of the content

Takes Good Cow to Get Place in Dairy

RIVERSIDE.—Unless a dairy cow can produce at least 350 pounds of butterfat each year the animal should be culled from the herd, according to figures compiled after twelve months of cost-accounting by thirteen dairymen of various sections of Riverside county. "The production of st least 350 pounds of butterfat should insure cost of feed for the animal, eare, interest on the investment and similar items and cowtesting is the safest means of ascertaining production of each cow in a dairy herd, says R. L. McParlane, Riverside county assistant favors adviser.

It was found that, on an average, the sale of butter fat or whole milk from a dairy pays the cost of operating the ranch, while the actual net profit is obtained from the sale of fertillisir, cull cowa, calves and feed sacks. Receipts from these items, as a rule, represent clear profit to the dairyman is literable course.

According to the survey, it is better for a dairy herd to be maintained on a comparatively small ranch, with all feed hought and fertilisers sold from the corrale, rather than on a large ranch, where part of the owners time-must be taken up with production of hay and grain and where the fertiliser is

"If a rancher gives part of his time to prowing crops and part to the care of his herd, the herd suffers," mays Mr. McGrarlane. "In cases where the ranch is so large that the growing of feed and care of the herd can be separated and put into the hands of different managers, the problem is different of course."

Cost-accounts of the Riverside county dairymen showed that on an average the price received for-butter fat was 80 cents per pound, while production cust was 80.8

Included in the survey were thirteen herds, averaging 48.3 come per herd. Production per cow averaged 588.9 pounds of butter 1st and 9199.5 pounds of milk for the year.

Gross income per cow averaged $971.39, of which $6.2 per cent was for whole milk sold. No skim milk was sold from any of the dairies in the survey. Cost of production showed a total of $313.30 per cow, of which $6.2 per cent was for feed, and 30.3 per cent for labor.

However, if we follow a cantaloupe to New York, we will find that its choice at the far end must lie between the Erie and the Fennsylvania, because those are the only lines that have facilities for handling at the terminal point. Both these lines have leased great pier space from the city of New York, where consigness may display their wares in enormous markets. The trains themselves do not go into that city, but stay on the Jersey City side. From there the cars are brought on car floats accommodating twelve cars each. before, so that a better crop than ever went out.

Taken as a whole, the 1929 season has been the most successful that Imperial Valley has ever had. The weather, which kept everybody guessing from January on, has proven, for all its peculiarities, most propitious to the "cant" man's pocketbook. Cold spells in the valley delayed maturity just when a rush seemed inevitable, while hot weather over both East and West created an unusual demand. The alower growing season made a sweeter and larger melon than ever before, and, while the volume may not have averaged as high as usual, prices have far offset that.

What sort of a season is it going to be? A grower and shipper who is familiar with every angle of the situation answered thus two weeks ago: "Buccessful without a doubt! Already everybody has taken a profit, although only 13,000 cars had gone out up to July 1. With a market control, the remainder must be good. In dollars and cents, it looks like a $3,000,000 profit for the entire deal. That's my estimate."

Which is some "melon" that Imperial valley is going to cut this year!

You'll like Vista the very first minute you arrive in this remarkable subtropical empire. You'll be impressed with the manner in which things are being done—signs of progress, and the certain visible evidence of its future economic importance. You'll fall in love with its gentle climate, where summer softly and unnoticeably blends into winter (and vice versa) without perceivable indication or physical knowledge of a seasonal change. You'll view with astonishment the rapid growth of young orchard trees when apprised of their age, as well as revel in the glories of nature with which Vista has so abundantly been blessed. Go where you may, inspect and investigate every horticultural development in the great Southwest, and then when you come to Vista—this magnificent country home and orchard district, we feel certain that you, like the some 300 or 400 purchasers who have found every desired advantage at Vista, will proclaim with sincerity and enthusiasm that it surpasses anything you have previously investigated.

No one is exempt from perspiration, and all perspiration has an odor. The proof of offense hangs in many a woman's own closet. A taint that can linger in a wrap which has not been worn for days is certain to offend others at the time-be sure

> Why run even a remote chance of offending when protection is so simple a matter? A dab of the nowy cream called Mum will neutralize every bit of unpleasant odor of the under-arm - or elsewhere and then you are safe for hours in even the closest contact.

> There is nothing harmful in Mum, or in its habitual use. That is why Mum is a boon to womankind in still another way-for the service it performs in connection with the sanitary napkin. Investigate this important use of this true deodorant which is rapidly displacing all less effective precautions.

> Mum is delightfully easy to use and quite inexpensive, particularly in the large 60c jar, which contains nearly three times the quantity in the 35c jar. At all drug stores.

RUB on a thin coatto the slare of the beach. body while surely preventing them from and deeply.

GAY swimming parties in the glorious, bright water! The feel of the sun on your bare skin! How full of spirit you feel afterwards.

Vacation days give you vitality for all the rest of the year.

Sunlight is the greatest of natural tonics, medical science declares. But be on your guard against cruel sunburn-it strikes treacherously, without warning. The right amount of sun is the best thing in the world for you-too much may be very dangerous.

There's no difference between sunburn and other burns. Sunburn kills the living cells on the surface of the skin, and forms poisons which spread rapidly through your system.

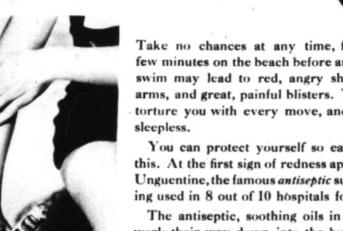

Severe sunburn may bring on a high fever, general weakness and seriously affect the nerves. Even a few hours unprotected in the glare of the sun may mean several painful days in bed.

Take no chances at any time, for even the few minutes on the beach before and after your swim may lead to red, angry shoulders and arms, and great, painful blisters. Your clothes torture you with every move, and nights are sleepless.

You can protect yourself so easily from all this. At the first sign of redness apply plenty of Unguentine, the famous antiseptic surgical dressing used in 8 out of 10 hospitals for all burns.

The antiseptic, soothing oils in Unguentine work their way down into the burned tissues and remain there doing their work. Once you have used Unguentine, you will never go to the beach without it.

Get a tube of Unguentine today and have it ready for that trip to the beach, and to take on your vacation. Always keep a tube in your automobile. At your druggist's, 50¢. The Norwich Pharmacal Company, Norwich, N. Y.

"Dynamite" Discloses Unusual Skill in Blending of Action and Sound. By EDWIN SCHALLERT

The dramatic mine disaster is the climax of the film. Conrod Nagel on ground; Kay Johnson and Charles Bickford standing.

A clash between hero and heroine

EXCITEMENT and thrills—you can look for them in abundance in Cecil B. De Mille's first sound feature, "Dynamite." It will play its premiere this week at the Carthay Circle Theatre, and it lives up to its title as a smashing

De Mille has emerged as a firstline sound producer, and also as a pioneer in effects. His initial picamazing grasp of the medium. You may rave at certain phases of the hokum plot that he presents. but in unexpectedness and interost "Dynamite" is a peak.

Back to the old society type of stories De Mille has gone in this transition of his to the audible screen, and all the rip-roaring glitter and gaudiness that made him widely popular with audiences is once more renewed. Naturally, it is not only renewed, but is also embellished because he has the opportunity to disclose an entirely new bag of tricks with sound.

"Dynamite" tells a highly fictional story of a society girl who weds a man about to be hanged in order to fulfill the terms of a will. (Don't become frightened at the mention of this antique dra-matic device!) The picture shows the woman as a selfish, foolish gadabout, and the man as a smart but heavy-handed cave-dweller type. Actually he is a miner. The girl is in love with another weman's husband, and connives with the wife to divorce him, literally buying her off. The unfolding of the plot largely concerns the rivalry of the two men for the heroine, but it is not the plot so much as the incident that matters, and the uniqueness of the situations in which the three leading characters find themselves.

De Mille has climaxed his picture with a mine disaster that is terrific in the realism of its effects. The two men and the woman have been trapped in one of the lower levels of the coal mine where the husband works. The walls and ceiling of the drift cave in with a tremendous din and uproar. The trio are prisoners, and it becomes a choice as to which of the two men shall set off the dynamite blast which will release them. Dramatically, this situation is powerfully developed.

What definitely impresses about the film as a whole is its action and movement. No conversations are stiltedly drawn out. The opening particularly is very animated in treatment. Aside from the fact that the court-room surroundings, in which the first scenes of the film take place, have grown somewhat familiar, there is no end of spirited and colorful variety to the settings for the picture's enlivening happenings. One minute the camera is in the midst of a race perticipated in by girls rolling head over heels in huge wire wheels, with yelling crowds attending; the next it is slammed into the grim surroundings of a prison, while on the heavy air hovers a plaintive song. To bou-doir and bath (true De Mille bath), doir and bath (true De Mille bath), to small-town grocery, and ramshackle village street it swings almost without pause, and with a constant and remarkable union with sound. What commands one capecially in "Dynamite" is the ease with which changes of locale are accomplished, considering the microphoning handicaps, and the smoothness with which the various scenes seem to blend. Practically all dull lapses have been eliminated, and there is never any tedium of dialogue. For varied craftsmanship this is one of the finest talkies yet.

cience.. the Master Producer

WITH the introduction of synchronized pictures, science has entered the entertainment field.

It has been the privilege of RCA Photophone, Inc., to blaze the path of this era with new and advanced principles in sound recording and reproduction.

Marked as have been these advances, the possibilities of this new medium of entertainment have scarcely been scratched. Newer methods-revolutionary improvements-constantly beckon. Their realization will be in direct ratio to the scientific resources applied to them.

Back of RCA Photophone, Inc., are the unrivalled scientific facilities of the General Electric Company, the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company and the Radio Corporation of America -the largest organizations in the world devoted to the manufacture and perfection of sound records and reproducing devices.

The RCA Photophone system sound recording and repro adds value to every sound P It gets out of them all that the studios put into them. Melles and distinct, it reproduces every delicate inflection of the last voice and every note of instruments with the comp illusion of realism.

The continuity of "Wonder of Women" was prepared by Bess Meredyth. She closely follows the text of the original story and has so constructed the plot that it leaves little to be desired.

Probably the outstanding sequence in the production is the one following the death of the child, Wulle-Wulle (Wally Albright, Tr.)—when Stone and Miss Wood return to their home from the city, Stone knowing of the boy's demise, the mother totally ignorant of it. In these scenes Brown has builded his situation with a finesse so befitting the ac-

Only the latter portion of the picture is in dialogue, the remainder being silent. It is my belief that the production would have been more effective had it been all-talking, for the sudden transition from silence to sound and back again is slightly unpleasant. There is, too, the possibility that the picture will not appeal, as some other ones of Brown's productions, to any great extent to the public, particularly the audience which insists upon lightness in its entertainment, This, however, is merely a matter of conjecture.

We both agreed we loved the musical part of the ceremony, with the singers in the choir loft at the back of the church.

THE bridesmaids all looked pretty, and Mildred Lloyd looked exactly like a little bit of a girl as she peeked around from under her big hat at the crowd while the priest intoned the cere-

Of course, Vernon Rickard, being Irish, had to bubble a bit after the solemnity of the ceremony, and he whispered, as we left the church, "That was a well-staged wedding. I don't think there will have to be any retakes. I didn't see Mrs. McAvoy's performance, but I'm sure it was exactly what a mother's performance should be."

MAY and Maurice held a reception and wedding breakfast over in the gold room at the Beverly-Wilshire Hotel, which was decorated with flowers also.

"Let's try and catch the bride to congratulate her before the photographers get her!" suggested Vernon. But it was simply no use. We couldn't get anywhere near her. The closest we got was near chough to wave our hands over the photographers' heads to her and Maurice, and wish them many happy days.

THE big crowd helped itself to the buffet breakfast, and among those we met were Harold Lloyd, Maj St. Clair and his wife, Ramon Novarro, Irene Mayer and David Selznick, Virginia Valli, Charlie Farrell, Julanne, Lohaston, Eddie Seiznick, Virginia Valli, Charlie Farrell, Julanne Johnston, Eddie Lowe and Lilyan Tashman, Laura LaPlante, Mac Marsh, Eddie Dil-lon, Frankie Dillon, William K.
